

Update for Parents: Explore the Latest NSPCC Videos on Child Safety and Wellbeing

The NSPCC has recently expanded its online educational resources with a series of new videos, now available on their YouTube channel.

These videos, released over the past week, offer invaluable insights and guidance on a range of topics crucial to the development and safety of children and young people.

Key Highlights:

- Addressing Bullying: Strategies and advice on identifying signs of bullying and how to support children in dealing with such situations.
- Understanding Healthy Relationships: Guidance on teaching children about the characteristics of positive, respectful relationships.
- The Importance of Consent: Explaining consent in an age-appropriate manner, emphasising respect for personal boundaries.

To explore the NSPCC's latest video resources, parents and guardians are encouraged to visit the NSPCC's YouTube channel. These videos are freely available and can be an excellent way to start conversations with children about their rights, personal safety, and emotional wellbeing.
